

The Collision of Technology and Nature

My daughter went on a wilderness trip to Canada this summer. She was out in the middle of nowhere, no cell phones, no computers – she wasn't even allowed to bring a watch. It was just my daughter, the other campers, nature and God.

One leader had a satellite phone for emergencies in case someone got hurt, so they could be medevacked out. So basically, the only technology they had, was something they prayed they didn't have to use.

You may wonder why I am writing about a world without technology in a technology newsletter. Watching this experience, I was actually struck to see the beauty of technology and nature colliding in an amazing way.

Still not sure what I'm talking about? Read on . . . →

Signed

Hillary Spear

BOOK of the month

The Servant

by James C. Hunter

In The Servant, you watch the timeless principles of servant leadership unfold through the story of John Daily, a businessman whose outwardly successful life is spiraling out of control.

APPS of the month

Puzzle Page

Exercise your brain with a new page of your favorite puzzles delivered to your device every day. Each day brings a new assortment of word, logic, number and picture puzzles to complete.

New puzzles every day!

How Toxic Is Your Body Language

It's a sure bet that the next time you hold a meeting, make a sales presentation, or attend a networking event, you will send non-verbal communication signals to other people. It happens all the time, and most of us don't even notice it.

Truth is body language matters—especially positive body language—to help put out a good vibe and raise your likability. You want to master it because it's what people see first before you even speak a word.

Here are some toxic non-verbal signals that you may be transmitting.

